CAREER IN LIBRARY & INFORMATION SCIENCE

Vijay Prakash Srivastava

Knowledge is power. Libraries can be called repositories of knowledge. The shape of economies keep changing and economies are characterised in many ways. Today's economy is called knowledge economy. According to the World Bank, a knowledge economy is the economy that creates, disseminates and uses knowledge to enhance its growth and development. International Centre for Technical and Vocational Education and Training defines knowledge economy to be the one that is driven by knowledge and ideas rather than by material resources. The human mind is a creator as well as repository of knowledge. In many cases this knowledge is made available to others in forms of speeches, writings, etc. Ancient knowledge and wisdom can be found in writings of Maharshi Vyas, Khalil Gibran and many more like them. These writings are available in the form of books and manuscripts, etc. In contemporary world where technology is ruling the roost, knowledge is also shared through videos, blogs and podcasts. Institutions also create their own repository of knowledge meant for use by their people. Library is a place where you find collection of books, magazines and various other sources of knowledge. As students, we might be making use of these libraries on a regular basis. The fee students pay to their institute, also includes a library fee. Particularly in higher studies and research, libraries become a highly significant support, as only limited number of books can be bought by an individual. At libraries, one may find large number of books on a particular subject. We use libraries to add to our knowledge and collect references. We may wonder what would it be like to work in a library. A career in Library and Information Science provides opportunities to work in and manage the repository of books and other knowledge resources.

What is covered in Library and Information Science?

When you visit a library, you simply see stacks of books arranged in a particular manner and an online or offline cataloguing system which helps find availability of particular books and their place in the library. However, Library Science is not restricted to just these. In fact, it is a full-fledged discipline of study at graduate and postgraduate level. As a student of this subject, you will go through a number of theoretical and practical topics, such as role of information and libraries in society, characteristics, nature, use and value of information, conceptual difference between data, knowledge and information, approaches to library classification, types of libraries (academic, public, special libraries etc), various formats of libraries (e.g. physical, virtual and digital), organization of library resources, cataloguing of library books and magazines etc., reference and information resources and their types/categories, application of information technology in libraries-hardware and software for libraries, concepts and application of library automation, web based communication system in libraries, library legislation, bibliographic standards, preservation of library material, emerging

TRILOCHAN POKHREL

UNSUNG HERO WHO PIONEERED SWADESHI MOVEMENT IN SIKKIM

Dr. Rajan Upadhyay & Prof. Binod Bhattarai

Salvaging India from the tyrannous clutches of the British Empire required a protracted struggle - a struggle that witnessed the birth of many heroes. While some heroes rose to fame and remained etched in our memories, some, who fought equally hard, did not get their share of limelight. But as citizens of India we ought to know about the unsung heroes whose contribution to India's freedom struggle somehow got lost in the pages of history. It is worth mentioning here that a lot of personalities from North East India too came out to fight the British rule and gave their lives to break the shackles of oppression. Trilochan Pokhrel is one such unsung hero of India's freedom struggle who deserves our salute.

Trilochan Pokhrel was born to Bhadratal Pokhrel and Januka Pokhrel and brought up at Tareythang Busty in Pakyong subdivision of East Sikkim in the last decade of 19th Century. During his youth, he was greatly influenced by the movements started by Mahatma Gandhi which were based on the fundamental principles of truth and non-violence. While there is not much documented information about his involvement in the earlier movements of

Mahatma Gandhi, such as the Non Co-operation Movement and the Civil involvement in the Quit India Movement of 1942. Pokhrel is said to have stayed with Gandhiji at the Sabarmati Ashram in Gujarat and the Sarvodaya Ashram in Bihar. During his stay there, Pokhrel spent his time spinning the Charkha and rendering his services for the ashrams and assisting the Mahatma in his daily affairs. He was so influenced by Gandhiji's teaching and his lifestyle that he would visit his native village donning clothing similar to what Mahatma Gandhi wore. This combined with his undaunted courage and spirited patriotism won him the epithet of 'Gandhi Pokhrel.' Also, Pokhrel used to greet elders in the village with 'Vande Mataram'. This prompted some people in his village to refer to him as 'Vande Pokhrel'.

In 1861, the erstwhile Kingdom of Sikkim and the British Empire signed the Treaty of Tumlong, which effectively made the present-day Northeastern state a protectorate of the British Indian government with the objective of using the Kingdom as a trade route. Three decades later, the British established a formal protectorate over Sikkim fully assuming the responsibility of the Kingdom's defence and external affairs. It was in this context of growing British influence on Sikkimese affairs that Trilochan Pokhrel took upon his shoulders the responsibility of educating and organizing the people of Sikkim to take up a peaceful struggle against the British Empire.

Catch The Rain: Monsoon 2021

How India is conserving water

India's progress, as a nation, is only possible with water security and effective water management. The vision of India's development and self-reliance is dependent on our water sources and our water connectivity. However, the challenge of the water crisis is increasing equally with the country's development. Targeting this problem of water management, the Ministry of Jal Shakti took up a nation-wide campaign "Jal Shakti Abhiyan: Catch the Rain" focusing on saving and conserving rainwater with the theme "Catch the rain, where it falls, when it falls." This campaign was launched by the Honourable Prime Minister Shri Narendra Modi on March 22, 2021 transforming this Jal Abhiyan into Jan Andolan.

As a run up to this Monsoon 2021 campaign, the "Jal Shakti Abhiyan-Catch The Rain Awareness Generation Campaign" was launched on 21 December, 2020, in collaboration with NYKS (Nehru Yuvak Kendra Sangathan) which is being implemented in 823 districts of the country. So far, it has seen participation of over 2.27 crore people, including Government functionaries like District Magistrates, Municipal Commissioners; Public Representatives, Sarpanchs; youth and common people.

What is the 'Catch the rain' campaign?

Population growth, increasing demand for water in the agricultural and industrial sector and climate change are major factors influencing the availability of water. Per capita water availability in India has significantly reduced due to the expanding population. If supply of water is not increased and the demand and wastage of water is not reduced, there could be water shortages in the future. Therefore, water conservation has become the need of the hour. This campaign aims to cover both urban and rural areas of all the districts in the country during the pre-monsoon and monsoon periods of 2021, till November 30. The primary motive of this campaign is to nudge the states and all stakeholders to create Rain Water Harvesting Structures suitable to the climatic conditions and subsoil strata. With people's active participation, this will ensure storage of rainwater as the 4-5 months of monsoon are the only source of water for most parts of the country.

The campaign focuses on maintenance of the existing Rainwater Harvesting Structures (RWHS) and creation of new RWHS, preparation of the geo-tagged inventory of all water bodies in the country, followed by a detailed scientific plan for water conservation at the village level and setting up of Jal Shakti Kendras as integrated water knowledge centres in all districts and to give technical guidance on RWHS. To ensure maintenance of existing Water Harvesting Structures (WHS) checking dams, ponds, lakes etc; removal of encroachments & de-silting of water bodies to increase the storage capacity of the WHS; removal of obstructions in the channels which bring water to them; repairing the step-wells and traditional RWHS; using defunct bore-wells to recharge aquifers; restoration of wetlands and rejuvenation of rivers will be done among other things. Awareness building drives & workshops to sensitize & involve people, school children & others will also be undertaken to encourage their active participation.

The campaign envisages inter-ministerial and inter-sectoral convergence of all development programs related to water and its conservation like Mahatma Gandhi National Rural Employment Guarantee

- (1) replenish the groundwater, improve the water table and soil moisture
- (2) meet the water demands till the next rains after 8 months
- (3) reduce flooding, particularly urban-flooding

Let us know about some water harvesting methods that are practiced across the country.

1. Ahar Pynes (Bihar)

An indigenous irrigation practice in south Bihar, Ahar is a rectangular embankment type water harvesting structure - embanked on three sides and fourth side being the natural gradient of up and use the stored water during dry spells. The massive underground reservoir can hold as much as 40 million litres of rain water. It harvests water for about 10 days per year and can supply water for as long as seven months. These wells can hold up to two crore litres of rain water.

3. Kandi Community Micro Irrigation (Hoshiarpur District, Punjab)

A type of irrigation project where solar PV energy is being used for pumping water from a canal to irrigate the area under command with micro irrigation, either by sprinkler or drip irrigation. The model is based on the "resource to roof" concept. The system operation is web based, wireless irrigation management. The project has been executed in undulating/hilly terrain and as a result crop diversification, increase in yields and income levels of the farmers, and huge water savings because of drip and sprinkler irrigation have been possible. With a solar pumping system in use, dependence on electricity for irrigation has decreased. Reliable energy at zero costs have resulted in reduced input cost to the farmers.

4. Mazhapolima Initiative (Thrissur, Kerala)

Mazhapolima, meaning bounty of rain, is an artificial groundwater recharge program. In the rainy season, the rooftop rainwater is led through pipes with a sand filter at the end, to open dug wells to replenish the aquifer. When multiple wells are recharged in that area, the groundwater table goes back up. However, when the water table is low, the water is retained in wells for a while, and then pushed into the ground. The system helps communities to have access to an abundance of drinking water free from nitrates, iron content and reduced salinity. This model is easily replicable and does not require much technical expertise.

5. Kuls/Kuhls (Himalayan Region, Himachal Pradesh)

Kuls are community managed traditional irrigation systems. These are surface channels that divert water from natural flowing streams (khuds). A typical community kuhl has a capacity to serve approximately 6 to 30 farmers and irrigate an area of 20Ha. The structure consist of a temporary headwall (constructed usually with river boulders) across a khud for storage and diversion of the flow through a canal to the fields. The Kul consists of moghas (kuccha outlets) to draw out water and irrigate nearby terraced fields. The water would flow from one field to another and surplus water, if any, would drain back to the khud forming a closed loop structure. Kuls are an example of how integration of the traditional methods and modern day technologies helps in aligning the technology to local requirements.

Need of the hour

Mentioning this campaign on 'Mann Ki Baat', the Prime Minister pointed out that the better India manages rainwater, the lesser the country's dependence on groundwater. Therefore, the success of campaigns like 'Catch the Rain' is very important. He called upon to step up water conservation efforts in the days leading upto Monsoon. To facilitate this, States have been requested to open "Rain Centers" in each district-in Collectorates/Municipalities or GP offices. During this period, these Rain Centres will have a dedicated mobile phone number and will be manned by an engineer or a person well-trained in RWHS. This centre will act as a technical guidance centre to all in the district as to how to catch the rain, as it falls, where it falls.

Efforts will be made so that all buildings in the district should have rooftop RWHS and that maximum quantity of rain water falling in any compound should be impounded within the compound itself. The basic aim should be that no or only limited water will flow out of the compound. This will help:

land. Pynes are the irrigation channels. In south Bihar, the terrain has a natural slope and the soil morphology is like sandy soil which does not retain water for a longer time. As a result, the monsoon water is swiftly carried away or percolates down into the sand. Thus, floodwater harvesting is best suited for this region. The water for irrigation is drawn out by opening outlets made at different heights in the embankment. This water is mostly used for cultivation of paddy. In Nalanda district, water conservation project Jal Sanchay under which around a 1000-km Aharpynes irrigation system was dug up and renovated, was conferred the national award for excellence under Mahatma Gandhi National Rural Employment Guarantee Program by the Ministry of Rural Development.

2. Bhungroo Groundwater Injection Well (Gujarat)

Bhungroo is a water management system that injects and stores excess rainfall water underground. This water is then used for irrigation during summers. Artificially recharging of aquifers by adding rainwater to underground water reservoirs enabled the communities to continue farming for more than half of the year. The non-saline rainwater when mixed with the underground saline water brings down the salinity of the groundwater, making it fit for agricultural use. The system also enables one to lift trends in library and information science and much more.

Course availability

Library and Information Science should not be considered just an academic discipline. As a matter of fact, it is a professional field with specific inputs, making people equipped for a professional career. Library Science can be pursued at different levels. There are certificate courses ranging from 3 to 6 months and diploma courses having a duration of 6 months to one year. You may join such courses usually after 10+2. The certificate and diploma courses, run both by public and private institutions, are mostly useful to get a job in private sector. With such qualifications, initially your role could be that of a library assistant.

At least a bachelor's degree in the subject is considered useful for those who are planning to make a long term career in Library and Information Science, particularly in government sector. Like LL.B, a degree in Library Science can be pursued only by those who are already graduates. Generally discipline of graduation does not matter, however the criteria of minimum marks in graduation may be applied by some institutions.

Large number of colleges and universities in every state and many union territories offer a bachelor's degree in Library Science. Those willing and seeking brighter career prospects may choose to join a postgraduate course which is of one year duration in most of the universities, barring few which conduct it as a 2-year course. The postgraduate course is open to graduates in Library Science. Admission is based on merit or a written examination. Most of the universities in India have a Department of Library and Information Science to conduct and administer these courses.

An indicative list of universities offering postgraduate courses in library and information science is given below-

- University of Delhi
- Gujarat University
- Kalyani University, West Bengal
- Gautam Buddha University, NOIDA
- Andhra University, Visakhapatnam
- Osmania University, Hyderabad
- University of Hyderabad
- Maharaj Sayajirao University of Baroda
- Devi Ahilya Vishwavidyalaya, Indore
- Karnataka University, Dharwad
- Bharathiar University, Coimbatore
- Maharishi Dayanand University, Rohtak
- Bangalore University
- Panjab University, Chandigarh
- Tilka Majhi University, Bhaagalpur
- Jamia Millia Islamia, Delhi
- Mohanlal Sukhadia University, Udaipur
- Sambalpur University
- Dr Bhimrao Ambedkar University, Agra
- Bundelkhand University, Jhansi
- Rani Durgavati Vishwavidyalaya, Jabalpur
- Banaras Hindu University has a M.A. course in Manuscriptology and Palaeography.

Many private universities too have included courses in Library and Information Science.

Distance education courses in Library

Science are also available. These may be good to improve one's knowledge and understanding about the subject. However, since for most of the jobs the requirement is for a full time course, a regular course should always be preferable.

Research opportunities

M.Phil and Ph.D can also be pursued with themes related to library science. In fact, considering the way things are changing in terms of information availability, technological interventions and changing preferences, there is need for new researches. Research opportunities can be explored both at Indian and foreign institutions. Scholarship-based research opportunities are also available.

You should choose an institution of good standing, which is well equipped and charges reasonable fee. Few of the private institutions have kept the course fee much higher, though the value offered by them leaves much to be desired. Hence the advice.

Job profile

As a librarian, your job is to manage various information resources and make these resources available to those who need them. At junior level, you will be classifying, cataloguing, storing, and retrieving the information resources (mostly books, newspapers and magazines). At senior level, you may be required to supervise such work. Enriching the information resources is also included in your work. So, you have to find out which new books, magazines, etc. are coming out that can be added to your library. This applies to digital resources like CDs, DVDs, video compilation as well. In such matters, you have to also seek recommendations from readers and other stakeholders. You will assist in budget preparation/ estimation for library and most importantly arrange for procurement of books, etc.

Career growth

You may begin working as a junior or assistant librarian. With experience and possibly with higher qualifications, you may move up to senior positions either in the same organization or by switching over to some other. In few cases, the role could be related to publishing also.

Areas of work

Maximum number of opportunities can be found in educational institutions of all types-schools, colleges, universities, premier institutes such as Indian Institute of Management (IIMs), Indian Institute of Technology (IITs), National Institute of Design (NIDs), Indian Institute of Information Technology (IIITs), National Institute of Technology (NITs) and others, professional education institutes such as management, law and engineering colleges and other specialised institutes like Indira Gandhi Institute of Development Research, Indian Institute of Advanced Study, National Institute of Applied Economic Research etc. In our country, government organizations like All India Institute of Medical Sciences (AIIMS), Defence Research Development Institutes, various other big research institutes appoint librarians to manage their crucial knowledge base. Some examples can be Central Drug Research Institute, Indian Space Research Organization and National Council for Applied Economic Research etc. Work opportunities may also be available with regulators like Reserve Bank of India, Securities and Exchange Board of India, Insurance Regulatory and Development Authority of India, Association of Mutual Funds and other national bodies such as National Institute of Bank Management, National Institute of Securities Market, etc.

Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha have their own libraries, so is the case with state legislative bodies, and the judiciary.

A number of public libraries have been established by Central and State Governments. Such libraries are normally on a large scale. One example is of Delhi Public Library which had recently advertised for multiple vacancies of librarians.

Some of you may also get to work at prestigious National Library, Kolkata and Asiatic Library at Mumbai.

Ministry of Electronics and Information Technology has launched an Information and Documentation Centre (Library) with an objective of developing e learning modules and digitising important books. The ministry has decided to establish a National Digital Library through India Education and Research Network, ERNET. One may look forward to get associated with such projects when requirements are announced.

Many Central Government departments appoint library professionals by taking qualified people on deputation from government sector.

In TV channels and print media houses, librarians manage both physical and digital content. Embassies and High Commissions too have their libraries. Few of such missions have established libraries which are open to public on membership basis. Well known are the British Council Library and American Library with their branches in few cities. Also, many countries establish their cultural centres in other countries which may have a library. New Delhi and few other metros in our country have some such centres where opportunities for librarians may be found.

Since there are so many institutes conducting courses in Library and Information Science, there is enough scope in teaching of the subject. Those who are keen to teach higher classes will do well to qualify in UGC-NET.

Digital libraries

As technology is dominating the world, libraries are also going the digital way. As a library and information manager, you may have to spend some of the time in this digital part. Few of you may completely get associated with digital libraries. Jadavpur University has a course named, M.A in Library and Information Science in Digital Library.

It should be noted that vacancies for professionals does not exist in bulk. So you'll not find a single advertisement with requirement of large number of librarians. Most advertisements will be for one or two positions. However, with cumulative number of such advertisements, opportunities multiply. This fact has been mentioned to give a clear picture.

Associated careers

With a background in Library and Information Science, one may find opportunity at e-learning companies, content developers, professional training institutes and social media platforms, etc. You may also get to work as a database manager, book conservator etc.

Skills that will help

For those who appreciate the power of words and images, a career in Library and Information Science is more enjoyable. To become successful in the career you need to have methodical approach, organizing ability, patience (to deal with queries) and willingness to help people. As the world is gradually moving towards digitisation and e books etc, some affinity with technology is definitely going to help. You need to be good at using the internet (for searching books, magazines and publishers etc.)

It is important to understand that a career in library and information science doesn't mean that you'll necessarily be sitting in a physical library and managing it. This is a career to explore and organize knowledge and information in various forms. Through this career you contribute in strengthening the knowledge economy. TRILOCHAN POKHREL ...

used to come home for long stays. While Pokhrel spent most of his time propounding the idea of Swadeshi among the Sikkimese peasantry, in his leisure, Pokhrel visited local haat-bazaars such as Rongli, Rhenock, Pakyong, Rangpo where he sat with his Charkha (spinning wheel) to make cotton threads. Akin to Gandhiji, he too wore cotton dhoti and a pair of Khadau (wooden slippers).* He did this, mainly to encourage the spirit of Swadeshi i.e. to spin and wear indigenous fabric, to establish and promote village industries etc. so that the villages could be developed as self sufficient.

Tara Prasad Bhattaral of Kapurpatay village claims that Trilochan Pokhrel gave away most of his land to his father. However, there are still remains of a small house where the late freedom fighter stayed whenever he visited his native place. The house is now known as Pokhrel Bari (House of Pokhrel). Bhattaral showed us a photograph of Gandhi Pokhrel and an envelope that contains the late Freedom Fighter's death certificate issued by Prakritik Chikitsalaya, Ranipatara, District Purnea, Bihar. The timing of his death is noted as 9 AM, 27-1-69. In 2018, the Sikkim government posthumously honored Trilochan Pokhrel with the LD Kazi Award for Democratic Movement.

Trilochan Pokhrel's death certificate

CATCH THE RAIN: MONSOON 2021

is tapped by using bamboo pipes to irrigate plantations. The water enters the bamboo pipe system and gets transported over several hundreds of metres across the irrigation land. This traditional practice is around 200 years old which harnesses the force of gravity for transportation of water. The zig-zag structure of holed bamboo shoots is arranged downhill, which diverts the natural flow of streams and springs across terraced croplands. Reduced channel sections and diversion units are used at the last stage of water application. The last channel section enables the water to be dropped near the roots of the plant. It is practiced in the areas of Jaintia, Khasi, and Garo hills of Meghalaya are largely made up of steep slopes and generally rocky terrain where the soil has low water retention capacity. Due to the rocky terrain, the use of groundwater channels is difficult and thus the bamboo drip irrigation system helps in easy transportation of water from the source to the fields.

7. Johads (Haryana, Uttar Pradesh, and the Thar Desert of Rajasthan)

Johads are simple mud and rubble barriers built across the contour of a slope to arrest rainwater. It is one of the oldest systems used to conserve and recharge ground water. Johads collect monsoon water, which slowly seeps into recharge groundwater. Sometimes, many Johads are interconnected with gulleys or deep channels with a single outlet in a river or stream nearby to prevent structural damage. These earthen check dams are meant to catch and conserve rainwater, leading to improved percolation and groundwater recharge and maintain soil moisture. Johads act as a source of water for drinking purposes by humans and cattle. They are called "khadins" in Jaisalmer. Availability of water for drinking and agricultural purposes has led to a decline in distress migration.

8. Apatani (Arunachal Pradesh)

It is a wet rice cultivation cum fish farming system practiced by Apatani Tribes of Ziro in lower Subansiri district of Arunachal Pradesh. This area receives an average annual rainfall of 1700mm. This system harvests both rainwater and surface water which is simultaneously used for irrigation and pisciculture. In this method, water from small streams and springs is tapped by creating temporary mud walls that act as barriers and provide storage. They also act as flow regulators and help in diverting the flow towards the required area in the terraces and vicinity of agriculture the land in the valley. The system uses the rainwater and surface water flowing along the slope. The water tapped at the hilltop is mixed with the organic waste and passed across the village through small channels. The local drainage system is merged with the irrigation system which, in turn, improves the nutrient content of water required for rice cultivation.

9. Phad (Maharashtra)

It is one of the best examples of a community-managed irrigation system. The Phad system, that came into existence some 400 years ago, is prevalent in north-western Maharashtra. This system is operated on three rivers in the Tapi basin - Panjhra, Mosam and Aram. Phad means a block of land used for irrigation purposes. The Phad receives water from the Bandhara (A check dam) and is diverted through the canal or Pat. The excess water is diverted back to the main river through Sandwa (the waste weir). Between each Phad, there are small openings called Bara. Gravity acts as the main force for distribution of water from one Phad to another. With the help of this system, small quantities of water flowing in the streams which would have otherwise gone as waste, are utilized for irrigation to the maximum possible extent. As the canal system in this case extends over a short length, the seepage and evaporation losses are less.

Additionally, the initial and maintenance costs of the system are low.

10. Jhalaras (Rajasthan, Gujarat)

Jhalaras are rectangular-shaped step wells that have tiered steps on three or four sides. These step wells collect the subterranean seepage of an upstream reservoir or a lake. Jhalaras were built to ensure easy and regular supply of water for religious rites, royal ceremonies and community use. Jodhpur in Rajasthan alone has eight jhalaras with the oldest jhalara, the Mahamandir Jhalara, dating back to 1660 AD.

■ IPCC's latest report on climate change should be Code Red for humanity: UN Chief

The United Nations' Inter-governmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC), of which India is one of the 195 members, has released its sixth assessment report. The landmark study warned of increasingly extreme heat waves, droughts and flooding, and a key temperature limit being broken in just over a decade. The report said, Earth's average surface temperature is projected to hit 1.5 or 1.6 degrees Celsius above pre-industrial levels at around 2030, no matter what trajectory greenhouse gas emissions take in the meantime. United Nations' Secretary General Antonio Guterres called the IPCC's assessment, the most detailed review of climate science ever conducted. He called the findings a code red for humanity, adding that the alarm bells are deafening, and the evidence is irrefutable. Several Indian Scientists have contributed in the preparation of this report.
